This fall, OSU Distinguished University Professor in the Department of Art Ann Hamilton will photograph members of the university and Columbus community through a semi-transparent membrane that registers in focus only what immediately touches its surface while rendering more softly the gesture or outline of the body. An extension of her new work that is on display in The Thompson Library and in the Wexner Center for the Arts' exhibition HERE: Ann Hamilton, Jenny Holzer, Maya Lin, on view September 21 – December 29, 2019.

Rooted in the university's mission to make its archives and resources available, these portraits will be produced as a part of a book and freely distributed this spring to honor the university's sesquicentennial celebration. The public is invited to observe Hamilton at work and to participate in her process and have their portrait taken on a first-come, first-serve basis.

These portraits are part of an ongoing series, ONE EVERYONE, which Hamilton began in 2012 in the Warhol Museum exhibition, Factory/Direct. The series has continued and expanded to other venues including The Minneapolis Institute of Arts; the Art Dealers Association of American's Art Show at the Park Avenue Armory (New York); Henry Art Gallery (Seattle, WA); Brown School of Social Work at Washington University in St. Louis; and Landmarks at the Dell Medical School at University of Texas at Austin.
