

•

NOAH PURIFOY: JUNK DADA OPENS JANUARY 30
WEXNER CENTER IS ONLY VENUE OUTSIDE OF LOS ANGELES TO PRESENT EXHIBITION

"It's the perfect moment to rediscover Purifoy, an African-American artist who believed in art as a tool for social change, and whose work speaks directly to the climate of racial conflicts and unrest that's dominated the headlines in the past year."—Vogue

Columbus, Ohio—January 5, 2016—January 30–April 10, 2016, the Wexner Center for the Arts will present Noah Purifoy: Junk Dada, the first major museum retrospective devoted to this important artist and community activist. This is the exhibition's only other appearance outside of Los Angeles, where it enjoyed an acclaimed run at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art. Featuring more than 50 of Purifoy's vibrant three-dimensional works dating from the late 1950s to the early 2000s—along with photographs and ephemera that give added insight into his profound impact on West Coast culture—Junk Dada offers a fascinating and career-spanning look at the work of this significant, if overlooked, American artist, who the Los Angeles Times called "the least well-known pivotal artist of the last 50 years." The acclaimed exhibition was recently included in the New York Times's and Artforum's "Best of 2015" lists.

Notes Wexner Center Director Sherri Geldin, "Noah Purifoy spent his artistic life drawing upon such early 20th century art practices as Dada, collage, and the "readymade" and infusing them with a more contemporary aesthetic of assemblage fueled by social activism. In many respects, he was both of his time and ahead of it, deeply respected by such peers as Ed Ruscha and John Outterbridge, but largely unknown to the general public. We are pleased to contribute to his long overdue recognition and reception—not just on the west coast where he made his home, but nationally."

A legend in California's post-World War II art scene, Purifoy (1917–2004) emerged as a distinctive presence in the development of the West Coast's unique post-war creative ethos. As artist, designer, and social worker, he used the modest materials of everyday life to produce assemblage sculptures and mixed-media constructions of dazzling visual invention, embodying an aesthetic the exhibition's curators termed "junk dada." Purifoy was the first African American to graduate from what is now CalArts and, in addition to making art, was a

Noah Purifoy, Untitled, 1967
43 x 43 in.
John Outterbridge Collection
© Noah Purifoy Foundation
Photo © Robert Wedemeyer

founding director of the Watts Towers Arts Center, created to preserve and protect Simon Rodia's soaring—if humbly erected—monument of and to that neighborhood

Bill Horrigan, Wexner Center curator at large, says, “This extensive survey is a long overdue and compelling examination of a remarkable body of work that shines a clarifying light on Purifoy’s inspiring work as an artist-educator.”

Junk Dada is curated by Franklin Sirmans and Yael Lipschutz for the Los Angeles County Museum of Art and is accompanied by a major catalogue with a preface by Sirmans; essays by Lipschutz, Lowery Stokes Sims, and Kristine McKenna; a Q&A with Purifoy excerpted from an earlier interview with C. Ian White; a chronology by Allison Glenn; and remembrances by Dale Brockman Davis, Judson Powell, Ed Ruscha, and Sue Welsh. Guests can explore selected works in the exhibition by using a special augmented reality app. The interactive program accesses photos, videos, and other content to deepen the experience with the work. Free iPad minis will be available to guests to access the additional content.

ABOUT NOAH PURIFOY

Born in Alabama in 1917, Purifoy earned a master’s degree in social work in Georgia, and worked in Cleveland from 1948 to 1950 for the Cuyahoga County Department of Social Services. While developing his practice as an artist in Southern California, he also cofounded the Watts Towers Arts Center. Working alongside such artists as David Hammons and John Outterbridge, Purifoy developed art programs for underserved children and furthered his commitment to inspiring self-discovery among youth through artistic creation, regardless of available materials or formal instruction. Purifoy was a founding member on the California Arts Council and served on it for over a decade, retiring in 1987 and moving permanently to Joshua Tree two years later, where he produced dozens of astonishing and audacious outdoor sculptures still standing today.

EXHIBITION-RELATED EVENTS

An exhibition preview will take place on Friday, January 29. Exhibition curator Franklin Sirmans will provide an expert introduction to the life and work of Purifoy in a curator’s talk at 5 pm. A reception follows at 6 pm. On Tuesday, February 23, Joni Boyd Acuff, assistant professor in Ohio State’s Department of Arts Administration, Education, and Policy, and Townsend Price-Spratlen, associate professor in the Department of Sociology, discuss the role of social justice and arts-based community-building in the work of Noah Purifoy. Walk-in tours, free with gallery admission, will be available throughout the run of the exhibition, beginning Saturday, February 6.

VISITOR INFORMATION

Noah Purifoy: Junk Dada will be on view January 30–April 10, 2016 at the Wexner Center for the Arts, 1871 N. High St. (at 15th Avenue) on the campus of The Ohio State University in Columbus. Gallery hours are 11 am–6 pm Tuesday, Wednesday, and Sunday, and 11 am–8 pm Thursday–Saturday. Galleries are closed Mondays. Admission is $8; free for Wexner Center members, college students, and visitors 18 and under; free Thursdays from 4–8 pm and the first Sunday of the month.

More info on bus routes, parking, and other visitor information:

<http://wexarts.org/visit/location-and-directions> or (614) 292-3535.

EXHIBITION SUPPORT

Noah Purifoy: Junk Dada was organized by the Los Angeles County Museum of Art and made possible by the National Endowment for the Arts.

Support for Noah Purifoy: Junk Dada is provided by Cardinal Health Foundation.

Additional support is provided by Puffin Foundation West, Ltd.

The Wexner Center receives general operating support from the Greater Columbus Arts Council, The Columbus Foundation, Nationwide Foundation, and the Ohio Arts Council. Generous support is also provided by the Corporate Annual Fund of the Wexner Center Foundation and Wexner Center members.

Media contacts, Wexner Center for the Arts: Erik Pepple: epepple@wexarts.org or (614) 292-9840 or Jennifer Wray, jwray@wexarts.org or (614) 247-6241.